THE best people in Carter and Boyd counties are said to be strongly and earnestly discouraging and denouncing mob violence. They do not think there will be any serious trouble when Neal and Craft are tried in February. The following letter has been received at Frankfort from a prominent lawyer at Grayson:

Your favor of a recent date is before me, and in reply I would say that it is the disposition of the people here to award Neal and Craft a fair trial, without mob violence, provided no soldiers are here to excite their passions. They have not, neither have the people of Boyd county, yet recovered from the shock given them by the sad occurrence at Ashlaud which followed the coming of the troops at the Boyd circuit court. But it seems that the people of the county of the same than the people of Boyd county, yet recovered from the people of Bo ple of this county, as far as I can learn, are anxious that the said prisoners shall have a peaceful and fair trial here without the interanxious that the said prisoners shall have a peaceful and fair trial here without the intervention of the military, and they are ready and willing to guard said prisoners themselves if it becomes necessary, and the people of Boyd have promised not to interfere if no troops are sent here. The report in regard to guns being bought to arm men against the soldiers is altogether without foundation. No guns have been bought for any such purpose. The people here are as peaceable as any to be found in the State. I don't suppose anybody here has ever thought of any such thing as you have heard. I have no doubt they can have a fair trial without the protection of troops.

Very truly.

Thos. D. Theobold.

For the BULLETIN. LIKE THE SUNSHINE AFTER RAIN.

BY MINNIE GILMORE.

Tho' the years were fraught with sadness, As they slowly dragged along, Tho' the hours that brought me gladness Passed away like some wild song. In my heart a voice is ringing, I shall never grieve again, For the calm and happy love-light Comes like sunshine after rain.

O'er the cold earth tints of summer, Keep back winter from our sight; And the merry birds of spring time Warble songs for our delight,

There's no autumn to the spirit, There's no thought of care or pain-But a warm and blissful mission Was the sunshine after rain.

Smiles of heaven over our pathway, Shed a radiance clear and bright, If the clouds should loom above us, Love can pierce the gloom of night; Still, oh, still, our hearts shall echo, In our joy this sweet refrain, True affection beams the fairest, " Like the sunshine after rain." December 23rd, 1882.
